CIA SURPRISE: Probably no one was more surprised by William Webster's decision this week to step down as CIA director than the editors of Parade, who put him on their May 19 cover. Spokeswoman Catherine Braden Hemlepp said the Webster interview and article, "Do We Still Need the CIA?," had been in the works for months. "His resignation in no way detracts from its relevance," she says. Another pitfall of having to publish far in advance: In response to a reader's question about George Bush's health, the magazine writes in the same issue that since suffering from ulcers in the 1960s, George Bush has "enjoyed phenomenally good health."
